

Manoj Pardasani, Ph.D., L.C.S.W., A.C.S.W., is a Faculty Research Scholar at the Ravazzin Center for Social Work Research in Aging and Associate Professor at the Fordham University Graduate School of Social Service. He has a Master's of Social Work degree and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) from the Wurzweiler School of Social Work, Yeshiva University.

Manoj Pardasani started his social work career in senior centers and that sparked his lifelong passion for the study of senior centers. He has conducted a number of regional and national studies on senior center programming, characteristics of senior center administrators and participants, and policy advocacy by senior centers, which have been published in peer-reviewed, academic journals. Recently he compiled an exhaustive bibliography of all research and publications related to senior centers from 1978 to 2008. He is the recipient of the 2004 Outstanding Researcher Award from the National Council on Aging (NCOA). He serves as The Director of Research and an At-Large Delegate in the National Institute of Senior Centers (NISC) and has been a part of their Research, New Models and Policy sub-committees. He serves as a consultant to the Council of Senior Centers and Services of New York City (CSCS), California Commission on Aging, and has addressed the members of the State Associations of Senior Centers in California, Indiana, Michigan, Tennessee and Florida. In 2010, Dr. Pardasani collaborated with the Council of Senior Centers and Services of New York City (CSCS) to conduct a city-wide study of senior center participants and administrators. The study findings will inform policy advocacy and program planning in New York City.
